TAMPICO ASSAULTED AND CAPTURED.

Seven Hundred Killed and Wounded on Both Sides—General Rocha, Commanding Government Troops, Wounded—Generals Alcantara, Ceballos and Correll also Wounded—Death of Alcantara—Nearly All the Rebel Officers Captured and Shot at Once—No Quarter Given.

CITY OF MEXICO, June 22, 1871. The siege of Tampico has terminated in favor of the federal authorities, which is another indication that the majority of the better class of this people are tired of revolutions, and also that the administration of President Juarez is determined, so long as in power, to strike hard and successfully against the old and popular spirit of revolution, which has for so many decades been a blot upon the character of the Mexican nation.

REBELLION OF THE REVOLT.

The revolt of Tampico was inaugurated on the 21st day of May by the officers and troops of the garrison of that city, and they held the same and the fortifications surrounding it until the 11th day of June. The rebels had possessed themselves of all the public offices and public funds, and also had collected forced loans from the commercial houses of Tampico, and by that means their efforts found it easy during the revolt to pay their men, feed them and secure their active co-operation. Their number was originally about five hundred, but by enlistments and levy it was increased to about one thousand well armed, well fed and able-bodied soldiers, with an abundance of artillery and ammunition and protected by five forts and a powerful fleet of gunboats.

General Alcantara sent to SUBVERT TERM. Generals Ceballos and Alcantara were sent with troops to the scene immediately by the Secretary of War, but did not commence active operations at once, awaiting the arrival of more troops and General Rocha from San Luis Potosi, which took place about the last of May. A complete investment of the place was then undertaken and accomplished, so as to prevent the escape of the rebels by land or water.

GENERAL ROCHA'S OPERATIONS.

General Rocha then planted heavy cannon within a short distance and to the north of the city, and opened fire without any other result than the destruction of some buildings and the extermination of killing and wounding of soldiers and civilians. The rebels thought to be more effective were then sent for and planted at other points and fire opened with no better results.

At this period of the history of the affair a truce of twenty-four hours was agreed upon to permit the families of non-combatants to leave the besieged city, but the rebels violated the truce and instead of occupying themselves in facilitating the exit of families they improved the few hours strengthening their fortifications and earthworks. Thereupon General Rocha determined to assault the rebel works. Colonels Molina, Calleja and others of the rebels were confident that they would be able to hold out against any force which the government could send against them; but they had calculated upon other revolutionary movements in other parts of the republic of sufficient importance to prostrate the government by diminishing the number of troops which could be sent to the single point of rebellion. In this calculation the rebels were deceived, for no other revolutionary movement was initiated, and they were consequently left to the mercy of as large a force of regular troops as the country could send against them.

PREPARING FOR AN ASSAULT.

Everything being ready for the assault General Rocha issued the following proclamation to his troops on the 9th inst.:

COMRADES: Tomorrow we must fight. I have confidence in your discipline and valor and therefore I have confidence in your success. You are about to liberate a city which you have won upon the field of battle. You are the best of the best of the army. You are the most powerful arm of the people, and it is your duty to fight your blood in defense and to secure the future of the country. We march then, valiant ones, to combat with our arms. The force of the revolution is with you. You will win our banners, always worthy, always beautiful, since they are the emblem of our liberty and our independence.

ASSAULT.

On the morning of the 10th of June the assault was made by the columns of General Rocha, which were personally led by General Ceballos and Alcantara, and which had been reinforced with the aid of the volunteers. The charge was made with such courage and firmness that, notwithstanding the shower of grape shot, cannon and musket balls which were hurled at them, the latter were almost immediately thereafter strewn powerless with fear and a consciousness of their impending doom. The assault was successful, and the rebels were driven from the city. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city.

REBELS KILLED AND WOUNDED.

SEVEN HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED AND WOUNDED. The number of rebels killed and wounded was estimated at seven hundred. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city.

FORT UNDER THE ROCK TO SURRENDER.

The fort under the rock was the last to surrender. It was surrounded by the government troops and the rebels were driven from the city. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city.

NO QUARTER GIVEN WHEN THE TROOPS ENTERED THE CITY.

NO QUARTER GIVEN WHEN THE TROOPS ENTERED THE CITY. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city. The government troops then entered the city and the rebels were driven from the city.

GENERAL ROCHA'S SEVERITY CONDENSED.

A portion of the press of this city has condemned the severity of General Rocha, his officers and men in giving no quarter, but it should be remembered that the rebels were most defiant, and that in destroying their own lives they were not only killing but they permitted the lives of even old men, women and children to be taken, by refusing to permit the latter to pass out of the city. The range of fire, although a truce of twenty-four hours was given for that purpose.

REBELS' CONGRATULATIONS TO YUJEROS.

The following is a translation of the proclamation of General Rocha to his troops after the assault:

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING IN THE STREETS.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING IN THE STREETS. The final hand-to-hand fighting in the streets and houses of Tampico, when the rebels saw that no quarter was being given, is described as having been most bloody.
